TEACHING TEACHERS TO TEACH

The Educators' Pathway

A weekend in Prague and Terezín

The Educators' Pathway takes teachers, trainee teachers, Heads of Year and youth leaders on a weekend to Prague and Terezín. They see where the journey of the Children of 1945 began, train in the Windermere Protocol, and come home ready to teach the story.

What educators gain

An external role model

Bring a qualified outdoor leader into school to deliver skilled or sensitive subjects. Pupils often ask an outside educator questions they would not ask in class.

Confidence with hard subjects

Teach persecution, displacement and prejudice in a supportive setting, through recovery and acceptance.

Nine principles, one programme

History, geography, PE, wellbeing, teamwork, citizenship and safety in one coordinated experience.

A method rooted in history

Anna Freud and Marie Paneth's work with children affected by war: security, relationships and supportive places.

The landscape as a classroom

Any section of the route, or a single location, offers learning for different ages and abilities.

Resources to take home

Lesson plans, practical activities and a journey of their own to share with future classes.

THE WEEKEND

- Funded by our supporters
- Educators pay only for flights, and their own drinks
- 3-star hotel, sharing with a colleague where possible

THE MULTIPLIER

One teacher with a class of 30 a year reaches 150 pupils in five years, and those pupils take the learning home.
